

Sabine Schwingeler has a background as a sociologist. In her role as a volunteer for Stadtteilzentrum Steglitz she has taught German to refugees for the past year. Though speaking German is key for successful integration, it is only the first step. Therefore Sabine Schwingeler has also assisted her students in many day-to-day aspects of life and she is looking forward to continuing her work in a professional setting.

Sabine Schwingeler would like to offer orientation and advice with regards to structure, rules and values of our society and she is working on building networks between organisations, groups, long-established and new fellow citizens of our district that will help alleviate and enrich life for everyone involved.

Integration office Steglitz

In the past few months Martina Sawaneh worked as a social worker in an emergency camp which is operated by Stadtteilzentrum Steglitz.

She is looking forward to developing prospects for our new neighbours in close collaboration with Sabine Schwingeler. Her mission is not only to assist migrants but to also help Germans overcome their inhibitions towards people that come from a different cultural and demographic background.

According to Martina Sawaneh it often turns out that regardless of where we come from we are all pretty similar and that there is a bigger bond between us as we originally anticipated.

Integration office Steglitz

The integration office provides assistance, hands out information and gives advice in all aspects of everyday life to refugees and migrants from our district.

We advise, support and want to open up new vistas: How do I find language courses, an apartment and work? How do I find day care and schools? What are the requirements to study or start an apprenticeship?

We provide information about the services of the government authorities, support programs for women, families, children, youth and seniors and simply about life in our district with its many offerings of clubs, associations and neighborhood houses.

Likewise, we invite all locals to come to us with their questions, ideas and suggestions or offers of assistance.

Even if the residence status is confirmed there are still many forms to be filled until the accommodation and work situation is settled.

The integration office helps navigate the maze of bureaucracy, finds fitting German courses and individual assistance programs due to its large network in the district. Due to the many cooperation partners of Stadtteilzentrum Steglitz we are able to find suitable specialists and contacts for all essential areas of life.

We are looking forward to your visit.
